Membership in Farm Bureau

Your membership in Farm Bureau is a family membership, unmarried family members age 21 or under, living in the same household, may be included with their parent(s) membership.

Full-Time Farmer-$150 Annual Dues: A person who makes their livelihood by farming, or a farm requiring at least one full-time worker. The farmer or the representative of the farm has voting privileges in the organization. A full-time farmer may participate in the full range of Farm Bureau offerings including its insurance programs and will receive CFBA's regular newsmagazine From the Farm.

Part-Time Farmer-$70 Annual Dues: A person who has farming as a secondary occupation, or has a farm that does not require at least one full-time worker. The farmer or the representative of the farm has voting privileges in the organization. A part-time farmer may participate in the full range of Farm Bureau offerings including its insurance programs and will receive CFBA's regular newsmagazine From the Farm.

Associate Member-$70 Annual Dues: A non-farmer who joins to support CFBA's work. An associate member may participate in the full range of Farm Bureau offerings including its insurance programs and will receive CFBA's regular newsmagazine From the Farm.

Business Member-$70 Annual Dues: A corporation or local business that works for and with farmers. A business member may participate in the full range of Farm Bureau offerings including its insurance programs and will receive CFBA's regular newsmagazine From the Farm.

Friend of Agriculture-$70 Annual Dues: A way to show support for farming and agriculture in Connecticut. A friend of agriculture member is not eligible to participate in Farm Bureau member services and benefits, but will receive CFBA's regular newsmagazine From the Farm.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: Dues are not deductible as a charitable contribution. An estimated 13% of your membership dues are used by CFBA for lobbying purposes. The remainder of your dues may or may not be deductible under IRS rules. Please contact your tax advisor.
